DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Akkara et al (Hematin catalyzed polymerization of phenol compounds) in view of Przybycien (5,711,867), both of record on 1449.

The Akkara reference discloses a method of polymerizing an aromatic monomer such as phenol , comprising combining phenol compounds with a hematin using a peroxide initiator (see page 2377, left hand col. Last paragraph) in that the reactants and the mechanisms have been disclosed on page 2379, Results and discussion section, Scheme 2).

The disclosure of the reference differs from the instant claims in that it does not disclose the hematin catalyst has been derivatized with one or more non-proteinaceous amphipathic groups nor the use of any template.

The Przybycien reference discloses a hematin catalyst can be derivatized with polyethylene glycols (see Figure 3) or diamines (see col. 9, line 42), carbohydrates or nucleic acids (see col. 13, lines 44-45) or methanesulfonic acid buffer (see col. 16, example 2, line 30) and the mechanism with template to form polyelectrolyte (see cols 11-12) .

Art Unit: 1711

One of ordinary skill in the art would be motivated to polymerize the aromatic monomer as disclosed in Akkara employing a hematin derivative, as disclosed in Przybycien, in order to gain the advantages of the combination of the references, that being electrochemical separation in which metalloporphyrins and metallophthalocyanines are utilized as the stationary phase.

Akkara discloses hematin catalyzed polymerization of phenol compounds. The disclosure of the Przybycien reference provides evidence that hematin derivatives are suitable for electrochemical separation.

The replacement of said hematin by the use of hematin derivative to have the added use or properties would not provide unexpected results to one of ordinary skill in the art.
